

“Consequences of Practicing Cosmetology Without A License.” Evergreen Beauty College, 9 May 2017, www.evergreenbeauty.edu/cosmetology-2/cosmetology-2consequences-of-practicing-cosmetology-without-a-license/.

Cosmetology is a trained profession for the use of beauty treatments for hair, skin, and nails. To be a cosmetologist you must have a license. You can not practice cosmetology without a license. It is illegal to practice cosmetology without a license or an expired license. If your license is not valid or if you don't have a license you could be charged with a fine or a misdemeanor depending on the state. To earn a cosmetology license you must complete a cosmetology course and pass. However, different states could require different things to achieve a license. If you have a license in one state, but wish to practise in another, you must transfer your license. Transferring a license is different in every state, but the state may require an application and fee, exam, or extra training. A cosmetology license is beneficial because it opens up career options and allows you to create your own art.

“Being a professional cosmetologist or practicing cosmetology for compensation requires, by law, a license. Failure to attain a license is met with legal consequences.”

“Cosmetology is the professional study and practical use of beauty treatments.”

The author discusses the importance of having a license while practising cosmetology. It is illegal to practise cosmetology without a license. If you do you could face charges. This is important to know because some people don't understand the amount of work and training it takes.